

THE DAILY HERALD

Salt Lake City, Utah.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1887

THE DAILY HERALD is published every morning, except on Sundays and public holidays, at the Herald office, corner West Temple and First South Streets, Salt Lake City, by THE HERALD COMPANY. Subscription price, in advance, $1.00 per annum, post paid.

THE WEEKLY HERALD is published every Wednesday and Saturday morning. Price, in advance, $1.50 per year; six months, $1.00; three months, $0.50; single copies, 10 cents.

THE WEEKLY HERALD is published every Thursday morning. Price, in advance, $1.00 per year; six months, $0.50; three months, $0.25; single copies, 10 cents.

THE SUNDAY HERALD is published every Sunday morning. Price, in advance, $2.00 per year; six months, $1.00; three months, $0.50; single copies, 10 cents.

Business notices will be inserted in the Herald at the rate of 10 cents per line for the first week, and 5 cents per line for each subsequent week. This will aid us to determine where the fault lies.

ALL communications should be addressed to THE HERALD, Salt Lake City, Utah.

VERY FUNNY.

It is now wired to the Loyal League that the Senate conferees will accept the Tucker bill, and a report to that effect will shortly be made. It seems to us that we have heard something like this before. If our memory has not gone wrong, it was telegraphed from Washington before the bill passed the House, that the Senate would gladly receive the Tucker bill as a substitute for the Edmunds effort, and immediately pass it. Haven't we also been told for the past eight months that the Tucker amendments had all been submitted to Edmunds and been approved by him? Was it not also wired that within a few days from the passage of the bill by the House, the measure would be law, the Senate having agreed to lay aside everything and take up the bill as soon as it came from the House? Our memory cannot possibly be at fault as to the manner in which the satisfied Edmunds and approving Senate received the bill. Its reception was met by a motion by Edmunds that the Senate do not concur, and that motion was adopted unanimously, although the Vermont Senator had heartily approved the Tucker amendments, and given the Virginia representative the benefit of his advice in drafting the bill; and notwithstanding the fact that the Senate had all the time been so keen for an opportunity to vote for Mr. Tucker's bill. It was on Mr. Edmunds' motion that the Senate rejected the House bill; Mr. Edmunds is chairman of the Senate conferees, and now we are gravely told that Mr. Edmunds accepts the bill without change and will ask the Senate to pass it, though two weeks ago he asked the Senate to reject it. All of which suggests that a certain newspaper's Washington correspondent is an ass, or that he has been instructed to telegraph something which would put new heart into the Loyal Leaguers, and induce them to pay their dues more promptly.

The Old Dominion Steamship Company acts as if it meant business in the matter of protecting its vessels and the public against the destructive and murderous attacks of dynamiters. On Monday some fiend managed to secrete on board the Guyanote an infernal machine charged with dynamite, and shortly after the ship set sail an explosion occurred on board. The vessel was brought back to New York for repairs. Now the company offers $10,000 for the arrest of the miscreant. The amount of the reward will strike terror to the hearts of the cowardly wretches who are engaged in the infamous warfare against the innocent and the guilty, the offending and the unoffending, women and children as well as men. One of these days somebody will be tempted to sell his partners in this sort of crimes, for men who will engage in such business are not above selling each other.

MORE OF PROFIT-SHARING.

Lately THE HERALD has mentioned two or three instances of the adoption in this country of the principle of operation, or more properly of profit-sharing. A Boston newspaper has inaugurated the system with its printers and employees; a manufacturing concern and a stone quarry company in Rhode Island are trying it, and perhaps half-a-dozen other establishments throughout the country are making the experiment. We believe the principle is a good one, and if generally adopted will go far towards putting an end to the disputes between employer and employee. The proprietor makes his men special partners, as it were, so far as sharing the profits from his investment and this labor is concerned, but does not impose upon them as a condition for this advantage any liability or responsibility for loss or failure. In other words, he offers to his men the use of his capital, giving to them all they can make from it, with his wisdom and their energy and industry, above a reasonable interest on the money. It depends largely on the faithfulness and energy of the men, whether or not the profit-sharing arrangement will be beneficial to them; but as all men are more or less selfish and grasping, the probabilities are that in an arrangement of the kind rational employees will strive harder and be more industrious than if they were paid a stated sum, and knew they would get neither more nor less whatever might be the returns to the proprietors for their labor.

The first instance of profit-sharing in war with Great Britain over the north-that has been noted is in the case of Rogers, Peet & Co., the New York coiliers, who perhaps do a larger business in that line than any other firm in America. A year ago they called their employees, three hundred in number, together, and proposed to take all into partnership with the proprietors, the latter to receive six per cent interest on the capital invested in the business, and the profits over that percentage to be divided among the employees. The arrangement was satisfactory all around, and everybody went to work with a will. Fair wages were paid. Ten days ago, the accounts for the year having been made up and the balances struck, the employees were again called together to receive their dividend. Like every other business in the country, that of Rogers, Peet & Co. suffered a falling off last year, but the books showed that after deducting 6 per cent, for the capital invested, there remained enough of profit to pay every employee 3 1/2 per cent on his salary. The arrangement is to be continued another year. At the meeting referred to Hon. Algernon S. Sullivan was present by invitation, and after hearing the statement read delivered a little speech, which can be studied with profit by those interested in the great problem of the relations of labor and capital. A portion of the address is here reproduced:

Of all the public assemblies in New York this winter this is the most interesting. It is a fact that will be noticed by the preacher and the editor, by the student of political problems, by the plutocrat, by the friends, I hope, by the foes of socialism. A firm of our great manufacturers and merchants by one act present to their fellow citizens more than a whole volume of theory about the relations between capital and labor. It is not the amount of money that is transferred at this meeting that attracts one's interest. True, that is substantial, and it keeps the occasion within the realm of business. But I am happy to be with you here, because to-night, as an established and enduring fact, Rogers, Peet & Co. have started a business on principles which introduce the sea and land sympathies of man with his fellows as one of the factors in business management. Look at their plan and then interpret it thoroughly. What meaning hath it? Employing several hundred men, women and boys, they have said: "Henceforth, in addition to good wages, there shall be paid you pro rata, a share of any net profits made in our business. I discover several features in this which arouse my enthusiastic approval. First, The employers have changed the relations with the employees. They do not buy labor. They recognize their employees as co-laborers with themselves. Second—That change implies a personal recognition of the employee. He is now told that he has become a member of a labor community in which each man is a trustee for every other member. His employer becomes his partner also. Third—This plan has another still greater merit. It is a message of sympathy and kindness to the employees. It is not based solely upon self-interest, as where man is striving for gain contingent upon the doing of others. It is made a system embracing the entire body upon a system of equality. The sentiment of the family bond is infused among all the forces. They are educated to the habit of mutual helpfulness. Fourth—The workman, under the influence of these new circumstances, has his mind enlarged beyond his mere routine duties. He thinks of the relation of his work to the business of the whole. Fifth—This establishment sends out to the laboring man everywhere a message of good cheer and to the employer a friendly exhortation.

TEXAS' NEW SENATOR.

It has been a long hard fight for the Texas United States Senatorship, but honest and able Judge Reagan finally "got there," having been elected on the thirty-first ballot, on Tuesday. His chief competitor was Senator Maxey, who has occupied the seat for twelve years. Reagan is a much abler man than his predecessor, being in fact one of the brightest and most clever statesmen in Congress, and ranking with the most active and broadest-minded legislators. He has been in Congress continuously since the Forty-fourth, and was in two Congresses before the war. Judge Reagan was Postmaster-General of the Confederacy from March, 1861, to the collapse of the rebellion. He has been in politics all his life. When little more than a boy he left his home in Tennessee and went to the then Republic of Texas, with whose history he has ever since been prominently identified. In Congress he has been among the foremost Representatives in the presentation of bills and the advocacy of wise legislation. His elevation will be a loss to the House, but a gain to the Senate, which is sadly in need of such brains and experience as Reagan's. Judge Reagan is 60 years of age, and is not a millionaire.

THE JOKE OF THE NATION.

It is really amusing to hear a little war talk in this country, and would be interesting if it were not so ridiculous. A Canadian militia man is reported in our telegraphic columns this morning as telling how the Dominion pensioners are being called out, and as saying that Canada could get together on short notice an army of "five thousand men." This is probably a misprint, but as the whole business is a joke, the figures might as well be stated inaccurately. As if there were really something serious in the affair, the Pennsylvania Legislature comes to the front with a resolution instructing the States Senators and Representatives in Congress to urge the adoption of such measures as will put our army on a war footing, and by a show of fighting ability compel the nations in general, and Great Britain in particular, to manifest respect for, if not fear of us. The Americans look at things in such a practical matter-of-fact sort of way, and are so conscious of the imprudence of the nation to attack from the outside, that one cannot help a feeling of surprise that the present war talk should excite anything more serious than a hearty laugh.

There is about as much chance for a eastern fisheries, as there is of getting up a fight with Germany over the refusal to accept our pork. The Canadians, so far, have done nothing they did not have the right to do in regard to the fisheries, and they are not likely to go beyond their recognized powers and authority in the matter. This country is not in the habit of exceeding its rights in dealing with other nations, and it certainly will not depart from the rule for the sake of coercing Canada into giving permission to a few New Englanders to take bait and fish in Dominion waters. The Canadian war talk is like the barking of the barking bench leg at the magnificent mastiff.

THE CARBON COUNTY (Wyoming) Journal says: "While the Journal is as strongly opposed to polygamy and other practices indulged in by the Mormons under the cloak of religion as any other journal in the land, it cannot approve of what is known as the Tucker bill, which recently passed the House of Representatives, and hopes the President will veto it should it pass the Senate, as we believe the bill to be vicious. The Territories are bad enough off as now situated without having new penal code regulations made for their government, and a further restriction placed upon them as a people. The residents of the Territories have just as many rights as those of the States, and should in fact have more, as the builders of new States, as a rule, are the energetic and progressive people of the older States who go out to subdue the wilderness and build up new commonwealths."
